

Professor's Art On Display in NYC

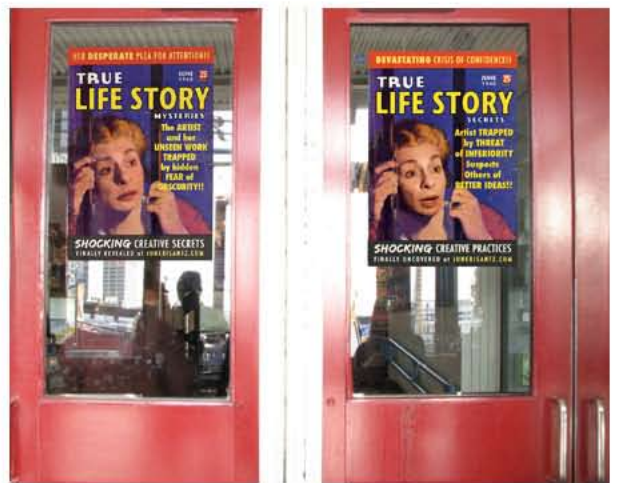

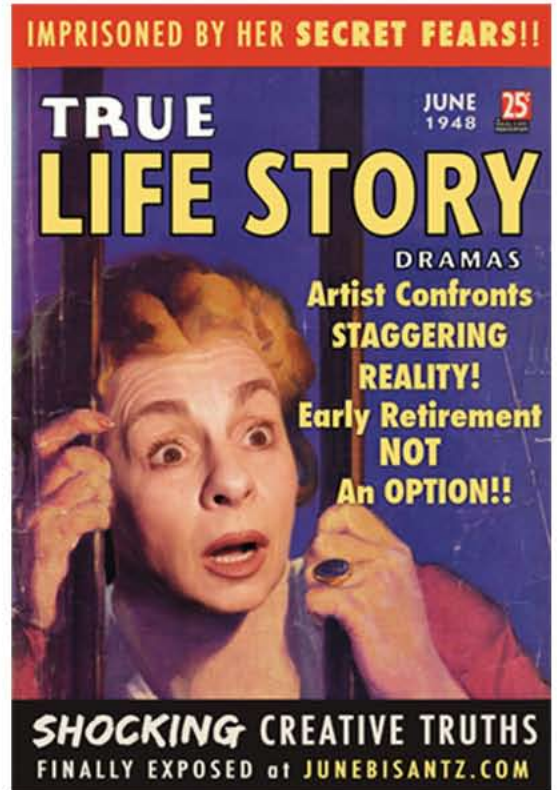

June 5, 2008

WILLIMANTIC — - The artwork of an Eastern Connecticut State University professor will be displayed at the South Street Seaport in New York City during the month of June.

June Bisantz, professor of Digital Art & Design at Eastern, will show her latest work, "True Life Story," which satirizes personal pressures, feelings of inadequacy and self-imposed restrictions in a series of four colorful images. The displays, designed specifically for the shopping mall environment, will appear on back-lit advertising panels and door clings.

The display will run through June 30 at the South Street Seaport Pier 17 Mall and at several subway stations. Bisantz, who has displayed her work on billboards, buses, street signs and movie theater screens, believes in the powerful reach of commercial advertising, and casts herself as the main character in the display.

For more information on her previous public projects, go to www.junebisantz.com.

Big picture • Local focus

Journal Inquirer

www.JournalInquirer.com

Wednesday June, 11, 2008

50¢

Faces In The Crowd

Area residents' notable achievements

Journal Inquirer Staff

Published: Wednesday, June 11, 2008

June Bisantz, professor of Digital Art & Design at Eastern Connecticut State University, will display her latest work, "True Life Story," through June 30 at South Street Seaport Pier 17 Mall in New York City. The work satirizes personal pressures, personal feelings of inadequacy, and self-imposed restrictions in a series of four colorful images. The displays appear on back-lit advertising panels and door clings.

Left, door clings, above back-lit advertising kiosk
South Street Seaport Pier 17 Mall, NYC